

Internship

We're looking for designers who are passionate about solutions that empower people. Our deeply collaborative environment will allow you to flex your design muscles and apply what you've been learning in school to real client work.

Details

Our internship program is a 10-week paid position in San Francisco for current or recently graduated students (or for exceptional undergrads). We're looking for both interaction and visual designers who have a mix of self-motivation, design skills, open-mindedness, curiosity, empathy, and thirst for knowledge.

As an intern, you'll get a chance to work on current Cooper projects. You may take part in user research, strategy creation, concept explorations, and detailed design. Along the way, you'll have a mentor to guide you through project work, and another to help you reach larger career goals. We'll make sure that you're ready to roll up your sleeves and get involved, and that you get as much as you can out of your experience at Cooper.

Sound like fun? Send a résumé along with a letter stating your internship goals and portfolio samples (PDF or link to your website) to internship@cooper.com.
